Since its founding in 1995, LNBYB has focused its practice on bankruptcy, insolvency, business reorganization and related commercial litigation, becoming one of the nation's leading bankruptcy and insolvency boutiques. LNBYB has successfully reorganized and sold hundreds of companies and has solved the financial problems of countless individuals. "We take great pride in providing our clients the best results possible under what are frequently very difficult circumstances," says David L. Neale, co-managing partner.

Ron Bender, who's also a co-managing partner, agrees. "We are extremely experienced and creative," Bender says, "and we focus our energies on what's best for our clients."

The firm has 23 accomplished attorneys. "We are capable of providing topnotch representation in any facet of the bankruptcy and insolvency arena," says David W. Levene, a founding partner of the firm. David B. Golubchik adds, "While we are capable of handling any case regardless of size and complexity, we make sure that all clients receive their lawyer's complete attention."

Three of the attorneys, including Timothy Yoo, are panel trustees. "We have a robust trustee practice, which includes serving as a trustee and state court receiver and representing trustees and state court receivers," Yoo says.

In addition to serving as a panel trustee, practicing attorney Edward M. Wolkowitz is also a law professor. Like all the attorneys, he understands the need for inventive, assertive representation. "Clients count on us to help them through a challenging time in their lives," he says.

Martin J. Brill, who handles numerous debtor and creditors' committee representations, adds, "It's very important to us that each client of the firm is satisfied and achieves the results they want."
